CONFERENCE OVERVIEW

The world around us is constantly changing at a pace much faster than one can imagine, causing much uncertainty, ambiguity and unpredictability in businesses. Working in the new normal brought by the COVID-19 pandemic, there are new expectations on businesses. Organisations must evolve to stay competitive and survive this era of disruption. Escalating procurement costs are driving most companies to look for innovative ways to survive the tumultuous times. Demands for strong Governance In Procurement has escalated more than before. Digital challenges, procurement integrity, regulatory compliances are some of the key issues facing organisations. Can the old rules, controls and standards which have been created for non-disruptive business models still apply in this disruptive world? Procurement agility has to be discussed today to help organisations survive.

Get a better understanding of how the Procurement and Supply Chain functions are stepping up to support the ESG agenda, while enabling digital transformations to support organisations in their cost savings and business growth.

MICG is excited to bring to you thought provoking and diverse insights and perspectives from experienced professionals and practitioners across a wide range of industries, on how organisations can be better prepared to step up Governance in their procurement areas.

9.45 AM PROCUREMENT & SUPPLY MANAGEMENT 4.0

The use of digital technologies such as cloud computing, Artificial Intelligence (AI) and the internet-of-things is transforming global industries and value chains. This Industry 4.0 Revolution will ultimately change the competitiveness of nations, industries, and firms by:

- Increasing productivity and new value creation opportunities.
- Fostering supply chain wide innovation and collaboration.
- Shifting economics and changing the composition of workforces.

However, these benefits of Industry 4.0 will only be realised through our ability to address the consequences and potentials of Industry 4.0 for the procurement, supply and distribution management functions. In particular, the ability to understand how these digital technologies and the data they produce can have a significant and positive impact on supply chains, business models and business processes.

As we transition toward a faster-paced and more connected working world, the question about what the future holds can create a degree of uncertainty for the procurement function. The Covid-19 pandemic has underscored the urgent need for the public and private sectors to streamline, strengthen and diversify supply networks by modernising the core foundations of procurement, technology and culture.

- Reimagine an agile, nimble and outcome-focused sourcing.

The panel will discuss:

- Can a green company apply sustainable practices at every decision point throughout their operations — especially among their suppliers?
- How might the sustainability agenda be driven through procurement?

2.15 PM AI IN PROCUREMENT: STRATEGIES FOR GOOD GOVERNANCE AND CONTROLS

In 2019 at the World Economic Forum (WEF), the world's first public procurement guidelines for AI were released, emphasising the vast potential of using AI in the public procurement sector. Contextualised to Malaysian settings, some key questions that will be addressed in this presentation include:

- How can Malaysian organisations gain the benefits of using AI from the recommendations listed by WEF?
- How can AI monitor and analyse extremely complex and large sets of procurement data?
- Can AI help humans detect any anomalies, e.g. unexpected changes in purchase prices and allegations of fraud by using machine learning algorithms?
- Can AI provide a clearer picture of the profiles of procuring entities and bidders to identify and predict whether this particular partner is reliable or not?

This presentation reveals the benefits offered by AI to analyse large amounts of data in a very short time, and the ability to predict future trends. Importantly, it is also about how Malaysian organisations need to be aware of the cost of non-compliance due to weak controls and systems in managing a procurement procedure.

M. NAZRI MUHD
President/ Executive Chairman, MyFinB Group, Singapore

3.15 PM A CONVERSATION ON "DIGITALISATION OF PROCUREMENT – SURVIVING IN THE NEW NORMAL"

The COVID-19 pandemic exposed digital gaps in organisations and never before has procurement agility been more important. Businesses that failed to adapt to the increasingly digital business environment struggled to retain their operational effectiveness. The investment to accelerate digitalisation is greater today than ever before and is key to survive and thrive in this new normal for all industries. A strategy of accelerated digitalisation will allow businesses to anticipate customer expectations and strengthen supply chains. Industry 4.0 connectivity and digital transformation are creating agile operations that are more capable of responding to disruption and recovering from it. Learn key insights into:

- The main driver of digitalisation in Procurement.
- The costs of waiting longer to implement changes.
- Agile procurement systems that help businesses and teams achieve success.
